AUSTRALIAN DRUGS CONFERENCE

Public Health and Harm Reduction

The Anex 2010 Australian Drugs Conference: Public Health and Harm Reduction will address the health and social implications of problematic substance use both at the individual and community level.

Program Highlights

Naltrexone: From Every Angle

Find out more about the controversy surrounding the use of naltrexone implants in the treatment of opioid dependence. Be informed by the pros and cons.

Laws, Regulations and Public Health

Legislative and other regulatory frameworks can help or hinder efforts to address the health and social issues associated with problematic substance use. Find out more about:

- International experience on decriminalising illicit drug use.
- Law enforcement policies and practices in Australia and overseas.
- Regulations that impact on hepatitis C prevention efforts.
- Drug laws and the impact of the Internet.

Collaboration and Continuity of Care: Bringing Agencies Together

What are the hallmarks of successful collaborations aimed at meeting the health and social needs of clients? Are there organisational or programmatic tools that can help in this process?

Learn more about opportunities for general practitioner and alcohol and other drug sector collaboration.

Hear about how such collaborations have worked for people with complex and multiple needs, young offenders and other client groups at the Anex 2010 Australian Drugs Conference: Public Health and Harm Reduction.

Information, Education and Communication

What are the successes and limitations of integrated health promotion campaigns through frontline service settings? How can we utilise new technologies to convey information on substance use and related issues?

25 & 26 October 2010 at the Melbourne Cricket Ground (MCG)
